

Cheryl Parker

A native of Houston, Cheryl graduated from DeBakey High School for Health Professions before attending Texas Southern University, where she majored in Biology while working at Baylor College of Medicine. She went on to dedicate 41 years of service to Baylor before her retirement. During her collegiate years, she married her college sweetheart, and together they raised three sons. Diagnosed with breast cancer early in life, she has triumphed as a 29-year survivor and continues to serve as an inspiration to others through her strength and perseverance.

Affectionately known as “Gigi” by her grandchildren, she treasures her role as matriarch of her family. In addition to her devotion to family, she remains active in her church and community, living a life marked by faith, service, and resilience.
